Features: This easy-to-use application is a must have for everyone that wants to have advanced professional monitoring and recording capabilities in their system without the hassle of technical jargon. Moreover, it has an incredibly easy user interface that won't confuse you while you are using it, and you can choose to use it from your computer, tablet or phone. You can choose to save video files to your hard drive in a variety of formats (AVI, MP4, MKV and more). To use this program, you need to install a webcam. You can do this with a free driver that you can download on the manufacturer's website. That way you can choose to use your computer's camera, which is probably already installed, or the built-in camera of your tablet, phone or smartwatch. A professional recording mode is available, but it is limited to 30 minutes and 2 channels (Audio+Video). Another advanced recording mode is not available but, still, the user interface has a simple and clear explanation of the different options that are available. You can download video files to your computer in a variety of formats, and you can also save your recordings in real time as they happen. The program can monitor up to 8 different cameras with a single instance. When you install it, you have the option to use the webcam's microphone, and it automatically detects the most appropriate device to do this. There is no way to directly monitor IP cameras through the Internet. That is, you cannot directly browse through them to see what they see. You can, however, remotely access them to see what they see from your phone, tablet, or computer. When you want to view or record a specific device from your computer, tablet or phone, you simply have to enter the IP address that is displayed in the program's screen.
